Description

This iconic building on the Great North Road was constructed in 1932. The former pub was bought by the Little Chef restaurant chain in 1970, and closed in 2007 due to uncertainty over the franchise's future. After this time, the building fell victim to decay and vandalism. In 2013, an architect's firm purchased the building and restored it to its former glory.

Problem

Damage caused by salts and excessive cracking could be seen on the facade. The render was crumbling and the brickwork underneath was visible. Graffiti had been daubed all over the building.
